

Katherine Kohatsu

Katherine is a partner in EY-P's Strategy and Transactions healthcare practice with over 20 years of experience working with clients to navigate through – and profit from – the evolving healthcare market. She works with her clients to capture billion-dollar growth opportunities that require the acquisition and development of new capabilities and partnerships.

Katherine specializes in the Payer space, having worked with many of the nationals and Blues plans, in addition to provider-owned plans. Her work spans business strategy, transactions, transformation programs, and operational support and improvement. She spends most of her time on operational planning and execution related to transactions, including acquisitions, divestitures and wind-downs. She has also led commercial and operational diligence for payer assets. Prior to joining EY-Parthenon, was a partner and leader in PwC/Strategy& Health Industries Advisory, Government Programs Center of Excellence

Katherine resides in Jackson Hole, WY. She is vice chair on the board of Lumity, a Chicago-based non-profit dedicated to providing teens and young adults from under-resourced communities with STEM opportunities. She is also the president-elect of the Andrew Carnegie Society, an alumni giving society for Carnegie Mellon University.
